Fake mews? Confusion over cat at Thai king's coronation ceremony

King Maha Vajiralongkorn's three-day coronation cost roughly $31.4 million.

Animal lovers in Thailand were thrown into confusion on Sunday over whether a Siamese cat presented to the newly crowned Thai king and his queen was a living feline — or not.

Thailand is holding three days of coronation events for King Maha Vajiralongkorn, 66, who was officially crowned on Saturday in elaborate ceremonies.

It is tradition at royal coronations to present a cat — as well as several symbolic household items — to a new monarch as part of the private Assumption of the Royal Residence blessing ceremony, which was held on Saturday at the Chakrabat Biman residence.

Cats are considered lucky by many Thais and the tradition of giving one as a housewarming gift signifies a stable home.

On Sunday morning, several Thai media outlets carried a photo of two uniformed palace officials next to what appeared to be a docile Siamese cat and a fluffy white rooster. The image, distributed by the Bureau of the Royal Household, was not captioned.

But by afternoon, the Thai-language news site Manager was reporting that the palace had used a "cat doll" instead of a live cat.

A palace official, contacted by Reuters, said: "The royal ceremony required the use of a rooster and a cat. It should not be the focus whether the animals were real or not, but instead the ritual itself is important."

Reuters was unable to independently confirm whether live animals were used in the ceremony or the photograph.

A Facebook page Maewthai.com — "ThaiCat.com" — posted a copy of the palace photo with a message from a well-known cat breeder saying he originally had been asked to select two gentle male Siamese cats for the ceremony but his cats were ultimately not used.

"I feel grateful for His Majesty's kindness for feeling compassionate about the cats, fearing that the animal would suffer from waiting too long during ceremonies, so the cats were not used," said the breeder, whose post did not identify him by name.

The breeder did not directly address whether the cat in the palace photo was a doll.

That ambiguity confused some Thais who posted comments online.

"So is it real or fake cat?" a Facebook user called Niphawan Rakpontee asked.

Another user named Krittaya Parichayanan said, "It's a real cat isn't it?"

"This is likely a stuffed cat," user Prapaporn Tongprasan said.

Thailand has strict lese majeste laws carrying prison sentences of up to 15 years for insulting the king, queen or the heir-apparent.

Historical images of the 1926 coronation of King Rama VII, the current monarch's great-uncle, show a group photo with female members of the royal family holding both a Siamese cat — a breed that originated in Thailand — as well as a rooster.

The tradition of using cats in royal household ceremonies dates back centuries, said historian and writer Sujane Kanparit.

"The meaning of having a cat is that it brings warmth to the household. It is an old court tradition that has appeared in the royal chronicles," he told Reuters.

Asked if the cat in the palace photo was alive or a doll, Sujane said: "I have no idea." REUTERS

Trump says Mueller should not testify on Russia probe

2 President Donald Trump on Sunday said Special Counsel Robert Mueller should not testify in Congress about the investigation into Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election. Trump said on Twitter that Democrats in Congress were seeking a "redo" of Mueller's report, which declined to conclude whether the president's efforts to impede the investigation constituted obstruction of justice. "Bob Mueller should not testify. No redos for the Dems!" Trump tweeted. The Mueller report chronicled Russian efforts to help Trump win election in 2016 but found that Trump and his campaign did not engage in a criminal conspiracy with Moscow. Trump has derided the investigation as a costly "witch hunt" and sought to characterize the report's findings as a victory. The House Judiciary Committee appears closest to arranging for Mueller to testify, possibly as soon as May 15. REUTERS

Cyprus police find 5th victim of suspected serial killer

3 Police in Cyprus found a body in a lake on Sunday that they believe to be the fifth victim of a suspected serial killer who preyed on foreign women for almost three years without detection. Divers retrieved the body, which some reports suggested was that of a child, from a lake west of the capital Nicosia, the same location where a woman was found dead in a submerged suitcase a week ago. "A body has been found decomposed. It is not identifiable and is being taken to the mortuary now for further inquiries," a police official said. The latest body was also in a suitcase, another official on the scene said. A 35-year-old career army captain has been in custody since late April on suspicion of killing five adult women and the young daughters of two of the victims. The semi-official Cyprus News Agency reported that police believed the body in the suitcase was that of a child. REUTERS

BEEN INJURED?

AUTO ACCIDENTS • SEPTA ACCIDENTS • LIQUOR LIABILITY• MEDICAL MALPRACTICE

Did You Know?

Ridesharing platforms such as Uber and Lyft provide insurance coverage to both passengers and driver-partners who are injured in auto accidents. If you are a passenger or driver-partner injured during an Uber or Lyft ride, you may be eligible to receive compensation for your injuries through Uber/Lyft's insurance. These policies oftentimes provide for up to $1 million in benefits, and may also cover your medical expenses even if you do not have health insurance.

The type and amount of insurance coverage provided to driver-partners depends on three scenarios:

1. Logged Into the App and Waiting for a Request: the platform's insurance will typically provide only liability coverage to its drivers should they cause an accident.

2. In Route To An Accepted Rider or During A Trip: the platform's insurance policy will typically provide both Uninsured (UM) and Underinsured (UIM) benefits to drivers who are injured in an accident.

3. Driving For Personal Use / Not Logged Into the App: the platform's insurance will not provide any coverage.

If you or a loved one has been injured in an auto accident involving Uber or Lyft, call the experienced attorneys at Fodera & Long, P.C. at 215-569-1212 to explore whether you are eligible to recover full compensation for your injuries.

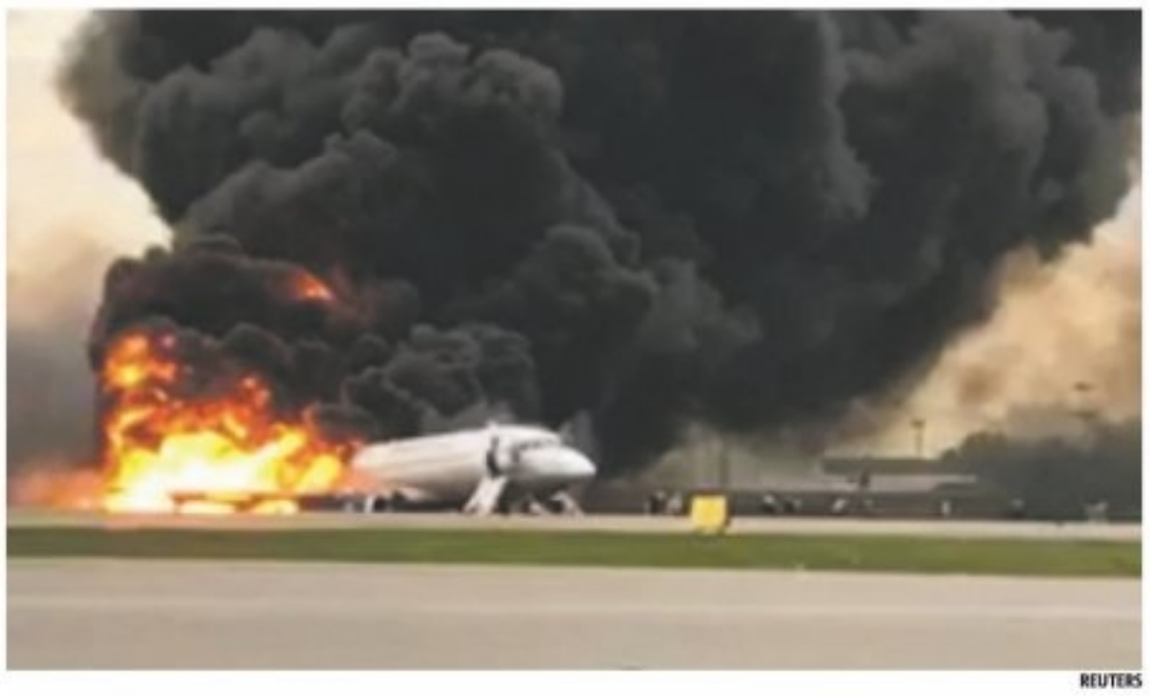
At least 41 killed after Russian plane crash-lands in Moscow

Survivors claim a lightning strike may have caused the disaster.



REUTERS

Forty-one people on board a Russian Aeroflot passenger plane were killed on Sunday, including two children, after the aircraft caught fire as it made a bumpy emergency landing at a Moscow airport, Russian investigators said.

Television footage showed the Sukhoi Superjet 100 crash bouncing along the tarmac at Moscow's Sheremetyevo airport before the rear part of the plane suddenly burst into flames.

Many passengers on board SU 1492 then escaped via the plane's emergency slides that inflated after the hard landing.

The plane, which had been flying from Moscow to the northern Russian city of Murmansk, had been carrying 73 passengers and five crew members, Russia's aviation watchdog said.

Svetlana Petrenko, a spokeswoman for Russia's Investigative Committee, said in a statement that only 37 out of 78 people on board had survived, meaning 41 people had lost their lives.

No official cause had been given for the disaster.

The Investigative Committee said it had opened an investigation and was looking into whether the pilots had breached air safety rules.

Some passengers blamed bad weather and lightning.

"We took off and then lightning struck the plane," the Komsomolskaya Pravda daily cited one surviving passenger, Pyotr Egorov, as saying.

"The plane turned back and there was a hard landing. We were so scared, we almost lost consciousness. The plane jumped down the landing strip like a grasshopper and then caught fire on the ground."

State TV broadcast mobile phone footage shot by another passenger in which people could be heard screaming.

President Vladimir Putin and Prime Minister Dmitry Medvedev expressed their condolences and ordered investigators to establish what had happened.

The Interfax news agency cited an unnamed "informed source" as saying the evacuation of the plane had been delayed by some passengers insisting on collecting their hand luggage first.

Russian news agencies reported that injured passengers were being treated in hospitals.

DEBRIS IN THE ENGINES

The Flightradar24 tracking service showed that the plane had circled twice over Moscow before making an emergency landing after just under 30 minutes in the air.

The plane's undercarriage gave way on impact and its engines caught fire.

Interfax cited a source as saying the plane had only succeeded making an emergency landing on the second attempt and that some of the aircraft's systems had then failed.

The emergency landing was so hard that debris had found its way into the engines, sparking a fire that swiftly engulfed the rear of the fuselage, the same source said. REUTERS

Cohen's new prison features matzo ball soup and full-time rabbi

Trump's former attorney is scheduled to head to prison on Monday.

With a menu that includes matzo ball soup and gefilte fish, as well as a full-time rabbi and a chance at the occasional visit home, the U.S. prison where Donald Trump's former personal lawyer will spend the next three years is unique in the federal system.

Michael Cohen is due to report to the Federal Correctional Institute in Otisville, New York, about 70 miles northwest of New York City, on Monday.

The 52-year-old Cohen will be housed in dorm-like accommodations at the facility's minimum-security camp, which prison consultants say has become a destination for Jewish inmates due to its proximity to New York City's Jewish and upstate New York's Orthodox Jewish enclaves.

"He's going to what I like to refer to as 'Jewish heaven,'" said Larry Levine, founder of Wall Street Prison Consultants, who served a 10-year prison sentence that ended in 2007 for racketeering and other crimes.

Cohen, who once said he would "take a bullet" for Trump, was sentenced in December for orchestrating payments to pornographic film star Stormy Daniels and former Playboy model Karen McDougal shortly before the 2016 U.S. presidential election. Cohen said Trump directed the payments.

Trump, who has denied the affairs, said he never directed Cohen to do anything illegal.

Cohen received a three-year prison term for the payments and unrelated financial crimes.

At Cohen's sentencing hearing, his lawyer at the time, Guy Petrillo, asked that Cohen be sent to Otisville but did not give a reason for the request. Petrillo could not be reached for comment on the choice of prison.

Jack Donson, a former manager at the prison who now runs a prison consulting firm, said the camp was "a great place for white-collar Jewish guys."

Unlike most federal prisons, which periodically bring in part-time "contract rabbis," Otisville has a full-time rabbi, Levine said.

The federal Bureau of Prisons said in an email that only four of the more than 100 prisons run by the agency have full-time rabbis.

Another thing that sets Otisville apart is the food.

"The availability for kosher food is much greater," said Michael Frantz, another former inmate, who founded Jail Time Consulting.

The commissary menu on Otisville's website advertises matzo ball soup, gefilte fish and rugelach, a pastry, alongside Doritos tortilla chips and Diet Sprite soda. Kosher items are marked throughout with the letter "K."

The camp is not fenced in and inmates' movements throughout the day are not as tightly controlled as in more secure facilities.

Inmates are given jobs, which Levine described as "busy work" like cleaning or emptying garbage.

But, in practice, work hours at Otisville are short, sometimes one or two hours a day, said Justin Paperny, a former inmate whose consulting firm White Collar Advice has clients in the camp.

For much of the day, Cohen "can pretty much do what he wants," Frantz said.

The camp offers weights and other exercise equipment, a basketball court, a tennis area and a baseball field, and bocce ball, according to its handbook.

Paperny also said Otisville grants furloughs — temporary releases for inmates, usually one or two days, which can be granted for family and other reasons — "in my experience more than other facilities."

Cohen is married to Laura Shusterman, 49. They have two adult children, Samantha and Jake. REUTERS

Muslim American Society investigating controversial event at Philly Islamic center

Video posted on social media shows children singing violent songs that weren't "properly vetted," the organization says.

letters@metro.us

The national Muslim American Society is investigating an event at a Philadelphia Islamic center where children sang violent lyrics, an incident the organization called "an unintended mistake and an oversight," the Philadelphia Inquirer reported Sunday.

Video recently surfaced on social media showing children at the Muslim American Society Islamic Center in North Philadelphia speaking and singing in Arabic as part of an "Ummah Day" celebration on April 17. One girl says "we will chop off their heads" to "liberate the sorrowful and exalted Al-Aqsa Mosque" in Jerusalem, according to the Middle East Media Research Institute (MEMRI), a Middle East monitoring organization.

"Ummah" is an Arabic word that can mean "community" or "nation."

MEMRI reported that in one video, a girl said: "We will defend the land of divine guidance with our bodies, and we will sacrifice our souls without hesitation. We will lead the army of Allah fulfilling his promise, and we will subject them to eternal torture." MEMRI said the videos were initially posted on the Islamic center's Facebook page but had apparently been removed. The Inquirer and Metro have not independently verified the translations that appear in MEMRI's report.

"While we celebrate the coming together of different cultures and languages, not all songs were properly vetted," the Muslim American Society said in a statement on Friday. "This was an unintended mistake and an oversight in which the center and the students are remorseful. MAS will conduct an internal investigation to ensure this does not occur again.

"We stand resolutely in our condemnation of hate, bigotry, Islamophobia, xenophobia, racism, anti-Semitism and all the illnesses of hate that plague our society," MAS said in the statement.

The Philadelphia branch of the Anti-Defamation League called the incident "extremely disturbing."

"Children should not be indoctrinated to hate," the ADL said in a statement. "These young people should never have been asked to make speeches and dance and lip-sync to songs that glorify violence against Jews and the State of Israel. The conflict between Israelis and Palestinians is deeply complex and painful on all sides, and the only chance for a peaceful future is to teach our children to pursue peace."

Based in Washington, MAS has more than 50 chapters across the country. The organization owns the Philly building that hosted the event and leases it to the center's operator, the Inquirer reported.

In a follow-up statement on Saturday, MAS said "the person in charge" of the event had been "dismissed" and that the organization "will form a local commission to aid in sensitivity training and proper oversight for future programs."

Trump slams Kentucky Derby result as 'political correctness' after DQ

Maximum Security was disqualified, giving 65-1 Country House the upset victory.

President Donald Trump on Sunday blasted the result of the Kentucky Derby horse race, saying the controversial disqualification of first-finisher Maximum Security could only happen in "these days of political correctness."

"The Kentuky [sic] Derby decision was not a good one. It was a rough and tumble race on a wet and sloppy track, actually, a beautiful thing to watch," Trump wrote on Twitter. "Only in these days of political correctness could such an overturn occur. The best horse did NOT win the Kentucky Derby - not even close!"

Kentucky Derby. REUTERS

In a stunning reversal, second-finisher and long shot Country House was declared the winner of Saturday's 145th Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs in Louisville after Maximum Security became the first horse in the history of the race to be disqualified for an on-track infraction after crossing the line first.

Country House's team had objected to Maximum Security's win, saying the 9-2 favorite's wide turn heading into the soggy home stretch impeded other horses. After a 20-minute video review, officials found Maximum Security guilty of a contact foul and handed the win to Country House.

The 1-1/4-mile race, called the "fastest two minutes in sports," and the first jewel in thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown, featured the largest guaranteed purse of $3 million and played out before more than 150,000 fans that packed Churchill Downs despite the wet weather.

Coming into Saturday's race, Country House had only notched one win in six starts.

Maximum Security's trainer and owner told Sports Illustrated they planned to pursue any available appeals against the disqualification.

Is your child staying up too late?

Researchers at Temple University are conducting a research study to learn more about how improving children's sleep and other health behaviors affects their weight status and overall health.

To be eligible your child must:
Be 8 – 11 years old
Sleep 9.5 hours or less each night

All families will learn how to improve their child's sleep. Some families will also learn strategies for improving eating and activity behaviors. Families who are eligible and enroll in the study will be compensated for their time.

Deserted beaches, empty rooms: Sri Lanka tourism takes a hit after bombings

The country saw a nearly 200 percent drop in hotel bookings compared with last year.

Sri Lanka's $4.4 billion tourism industry is reeling from cancellations as travelers shun the sun and sand of the Indian Ocean island after multiple suicide bombings that killed over 250 people two weeks ago.

Suspected suicide bombers from little-known Islamic groups in Sri Lanka attacked churches and luxury hotels in the country on Easter Sunday, killing worshippers, tourists and their families. Islamic State claimed responsibility for the attacks.

Tourism, which accounts for 5 percent of the country's gross domestic product, has suffered as tourists from around the world canceled hotel and flight bookings fearing more attacks.

"It's a big blow to the economy as well as the tourism industry," Sri Lankan President Maithripala Sirisena said in an interview on Saturday. "For the economy to develop, it's important tourism return to where it was before the attacks."

Net hotel bookings dropped a staggering 186 percent on average over the week following the attacks compared to the same period last year, data from travel consultancy ForwardKeys showed. A decline of more than 100 percent indicates more cancellations than bookings.

Cancellation rates at hotels across the country averaged 70 percent as of Saturday, with the capital Colombo taking a bigger hit, Sri Lanka's Tourism Bureau Chairman Kishu Gomes told Reuters.

"Some airlines have also discontinued frequency of flights. Load factor is much lower than it used to be," Gomes said. "It is a worrying factor for sure."

Tourism took off in Sri Lanka, which boasts a 1,000-mile-long coastline, following the end of the decades-long civil war with Tamil separatists in 2009. It was Sri Lanka's third-largest and fastest-growing source of foreign currency last year.

Decisive policy and security measures will be important to revive the industry and support economic growth, the International Monetary Fund has said.

For now, businesses from luxury hotels to beach shacks are facing mounting losses.

In Bentota, one of a string of beach resorts south of Colombo, occupancy rates have plummeted, according to interviews with hotel managers.

Samanmali Collone, 54, runs the seven-room Warahena Beach Hotel in Bentota, where rooms cost 10,000 Sri Lankan rupees ($56) per night. Her hotel had previously been fully booked for the day when Reuters visited on Thursday, but when news of the bombings on Easter Sunday emerged, all of her guests canceled.

"There are no bookings. This week, next month, even in October — they have all canceled," she said, speaking in her deserted beachside restaurant where waiters polished glasses and rearranged tables, but without any sign of any guests arriving.

Collone said if bookings do not pick up soon, she will have to let go some of her 16 staff.

"We have had issues before but this is completely different," she said. REUTERS

Sri Lanka police discover suspected training camp for Islamist militants

Sri Lankan police on Sunday discovered a 10-acre camp in the eastern town of Kattankudy, where Islamist militants linked to the deadly Easter attacks are believed to have practiced shooting and bombmaking.

The walled terrain is nestled in a poor residential area on the outskirts of the hometown of Zahran Hashim, who is believed to have been a key player in plotting the April 21 attacks. Islamic State has claimed responsibility for the church and hotel bombings that killed more than 250 people.

The narrow, sandy plot is dotted with a cinderblock 4-story watchtower, as well as mango trees, a chicken coop and a goat shed.

"They wanted to show this place was normal. If someone comes to see, it looks like a farm. But what they were doing is terrorism," said a senior police officer in the Batticaloa area, asking to remain anonymous because he was not authorized to speak to media.

Police found bullet holes in the wall on one side of the grounds, as well as long tubes suspected of holding bombs, the officer said.

'Avengers: Endgame' assembles second-biggest second weekend ever

The Marvel film became the fastest film to gross $2 billion globally.

Disney's "Avengers: Endgame" continues its unprecedented box office run, assembling another $145 million at the domestic box office during its second weekend in theaters.

"Avengers: Endgame" now stands as the second-biggest movie of all time with $2.188 billion worldwide. The Marvel juggernaut became the fastest film to gross $2 billion globally in just 11 days, crushing "Avatar"'s record of 47 days. It has now generated $619 million at the domestic box office and $1.56 billion internationally.

In North America, "Avengers: Endgame" dipped 59 percent from its opening weekend. That wasn't enough to secure the biggest second weekend of all time, a record still held by "Star Wars: The Force Awakens" with $149 million. However, it passed "Avengers: Infinity War" ($114 million) to hold the second-biggest weekend ever. Only six films have ever surpassed $100 million in their second weekends.

While "Avengers: Endgame" continues to be the de facto choice among moviegoers, a number of brave studios opened new movies to mixed results.

"The Intruder," a psychological thriller from Sony and Screen Gems, fared the best among newcomers. It debuted in second place, amassing $11 million from 2,222 North American locations. That's a solid start since the studio shelled out $8 million to produce "The Intruder." The PG-13 thriller centers on a married couple who recently purchased their dream home, only to realize the seller keeps creepily meddling in their life.

"Avengers: Endgame" now stands as the second-biggest movie of all time with $2.188 billion worldwide.

Lionsgate's "Long Shot," a raunchy R-rated romantic comedy starring Seth Rogen and Charlize Theron, nabbed the No. 3 spot with a tepid $10 million from 3,230 screens. Jonathan Levine directed the movie about a journalist (Rogen) who tries to win over his former babysitter-turned-politican (Theron), who is now running for president. It garnered mostly positive reviews since its premiere at South by Southwest. The opening weekend audience skewed female (56 percent), while 68 percent of moviegoers were over the age of 35.

This weekend's final new release, "UglyDolls," launched in fourth place well below expectations, stumbling with $8.5 million from 3,652 venues. STX's ani-

'Reclaiming our power'

"The Pleasure Is Mine" is all about empowering women to speak up about sex and pleasure.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

In the era of the #MeToo movement, Times Up and the overall empowerment of women there has been a lot of talk about what women don't want. The importance of having your voice heard is paramount, but it's not all about what females don't want in their lives. It can also be about what they do want. KY wanted to explore that notion regarding women and their pleasure and recruited creative director Lauren Greenfield to make an important docuseries, "The Pleasure Is Mine," happen. Greenfield teamed up with Emmy Award-winning director Amy Berg and together this dynamic duo empowered everyday women to speak up about what they want and break the stigma around conversations regarding sex. Metro sat down with Greenfield (LG) and Berg (AB) to learn more about the docuseries, hear their thoughts on why there is such a stigma and overall get a sense on why women's voices need to be heard on this subject.

Where did the idea for "The Pleasure Is Mine" come from initially?

LG: KY wanted to do a docu-piece about women's pleasure and sexual empowerment to break down the taboo about talking about women's pleasure, so that's where it started. We had this new company we had just launched, Girl Culture Films, representing a group of incredible female directors for commercials and branded content, so when this came from KY I immediately thought of Amy Berg, who is such an amazing documentarian. [Amy is] not afraid to ask any tough or uncomfortable questions. She came up with the idea of, in the context of this piece, bringing in Dr. Holly Richmond and a sex therapist in an educational setting in a way where a really diverse group of women could talk about all of the taboo issues around sex and what gets in the way of women's pleasure.

In this day and age, why do you think it's important for women to have this conversation about sex?

LG: Well, I mean, of course it's been an incredible time with female empowerment. Just from my point of view, talking about non-consensual sex has been so important and in a way it kind of paved the way to also have a conversation about consensual sex and how women can have a voice and have empowerment in the bedroom to also have pleasure, which has been a kind of not-talked-about thing. In a way, it's like the next step, that expression and voice. Just on that point, one of the girls in the project says, "If we don't know what feels good, it's hard to know when to say no." I think that it's a piece of choice and empowerment. Women talked about sometimes looking at their watch and just waiting for it to be done and that kind of thing, and of course in that setting it's consensual sex. But it's this idea that women can break through the boundaries and actually also find pleasure and also just talk about their sexual needs and desires.

Amy Berg. GETTY IMAGES

AB: I think that there was this kind of overall feeling after the last presidential election and conversation about women being disrespected. "Locker room talk" became such an important narrative, and then the Women's March stepped onto the stage and allowed women to support each other and be empowered by their presence. For me, I was documenting the women's movement the past couple of years and I was just watching the power of the sisterhood and seeing how much comes from talking about things amongst ourselves and really being vocal about things that have been taboo for years, such as sex. I was watching women stick up for what they didn't want, so when this job came I thought it would be interesting to talk about what women do want and how to express their power. I thought through a group setting there would be something interesting that would happen in the room.

Since this is all about women having a difficult time speaking up about what they do want, did you find that the participants were hesitant when discussing this subject? Did it take some time to get them to talk about it?

AB: I think it was easier in the group setting, but of course there were some women that were quieter in that first round. But I think once they all established a rapport with each other, there was extreme power in the room.

LG: One of the big surprises for me, I feel like Amy was comfortable talking about anything and so uninhibited but I actually didn't know if we would find women that wanted to talk about this, and who were just a cross-section of everyday women. I was really surprised that it almost seemed like people wanted and needed to talk about it. There's just something cathartic even just talking about it. So people were actually really excited to have the opportunity to talk about things that they had obviously thought a lot about before but hadn't had a chance to talk about so openly.

AB: There was kind of a nervous thrill when people would talk about sex for the first time and say certain words, and then it became normalized like any other sort of conversation. We have to overcome the hateful language around women who are promiscuous or women who enjoy themselves during sex. That is what we've learned with this, like I said, with this kind of movement, reclaiming our power.

"The Pleasure Is Mine" was released on April 30 and is available to stream now.

Is being single a new global trend?

According to statistics, more and more people around the globe think about living without being in a couple as adults. Metro investigates the phenomenon.

MIGUEL VELÁZQUEZ

Data from the independent think tank Pew Research Center confirms that the marriage rate has decreased in recent years. At the same time, the number of divorces has significantly grown. Statistics state that at least 25 percent of the population will never marry. And that phenomenon is spreading around the globe, making new generations the loneliest in history.

"It is happening all over the world," Erick Linenberg, professor of sociology at the Institute for Public Knowledge, New York University, explained to Metro. "Marriage rates are down in Europe and in much of Asia, in particular. And in recent years the nations with the greatest increase in people living alone include China, India and Brazil."

He added: "I believe that the global rise of living alone represents the greatest social change of the last 60 years that we have failed to name or identify. I'd bet everyone who's reading this can think of someone in their life who's currently alone. It's an extraordinary social experiment, and one that's worth following closely."

It could be a positive thing

Experts agree that being single is a global trend, which involves more and more people over time. But according to Paul Dolan, professor at the Department of Psychological and Behavioural Science of the London School of Economics and Political Science, it is "perfect" as long as it makes them happy.

ISTOCK

"The main point is that people should stick to something that makes them happy… without harming others, of course. And we should not judge them harshly if they go against social expectations," he stated. "So, if being single make those people happy, then it is a good thing."

Dolan commented: "We should not ignore the fact that more [single] people will probably mean fewer babies being born, and that is great from an environmental point of view. Oregon State University researchers compared the potential impact of completing six "green" activities with the simple decision to have one less child. The six environmental habits included fuel-efficient driving; halving annual car mileage; fitting double glazing; using low-energy light bulbs; replacing an inefficient fridge; and making sure all paper, tin and glass was recycled. Adopting all six pro-environmental activities can reduce your carbon footprint by an impressive 486 tons. But if you have one less child it could be reduced by 9,441 tons — potentially 20 times more.

Rather than not getting married at all, new generations prefer to postpone it and give more space to their careers. According to Nancy J. Smith-Hefner, professor at the Department of Anthropology at Boston University, in the U.S. there is a name for that.

"There is a term for the phenomenon that was first proposed by anthropologist Diane Singerman: 'waithood.' That is, young people are putting marriage off for a variety of different reasons. And as a result, adolescence and full adulthood has expanded.

"The issue is that young people are deciding to avoid living together as a couple. They rather prefer to go to school or push their careers than get married. Although that does not mean they do not have relations," Smith-Hefner said.

The professor made an example of Japan, where it was revealed that 36 percent of local males aged 16 to 19 confirmed that they had "no interest" in sex.

"Such people are referred to as 'herbivore men.' They are protesting against the fact that the types of jobs their fathers had are no longer available. They are against the commodity of love and romance and resent the economic expectations placed on them by women. And this is having a major impact on birth rates and the economy."

Smith-Hefner concluded: "But it's not just men who are putting marriage off the table. Women are doing so as well. They have now surpassed the number of men attending university in many places around the globe. And as a result, they prefer education and work instead of a couple."

'The Story of God' continues

The Emmy Award-nominated series is back with its third season on National Geographic. Metro chatted with executive producer James Younger, who revealed some details of this new installment that is divided into six episodes.

After two successful seasons, the series "The Story of God" returns with a new installment. The new episodes of the project led by Morgan Freeman present a comprehensive view of the religions practiced in the world, exploring traditions that go back thousands of years.

With the third season, viewers are able to witness Freeman's new discoveries, which took him to 30 cities.

Metro spoke with executive producer James Younger, who revealed to us some of the challenges they faced in this new season and how it is to work with Morgan Freeman, among other things.

The interview

"Having to work on the series for three years has changed my opinion about religion. It has been an incredible experience to be able to interview so many people and explore the world in different ways," says Younger.

Entering the third season of "The Story of God," the producer notices:

"People have their own perception of why there is a true god. In the history of religion, we can stop at a point to look at the past and find some things that sustain the existence of a god."

The production team traveled the world on an interreligious tour visiting 30 cities of historical and anthropological importance, among them: Jerusalem, Kathmandu, Jericho, Rome, Paris and Toronto.

During this new season, Freeman traces the history of God's counterparts: the devil and the Antichrist.

"We are touching the subject of Satanism from the roots, not so much as it is represented in the modern world. We were at The Seat of Satan, in Turkey, and we got there through the Book of Revelations, which seems to have been written at the end of the first millennium, and what it offers us is a view of what was happening between the Romans and the first Christians," explains the executive producer.

Encounters with gods

During this search, Younger and Freeman met with Kumari, the female goddess of Nepal.

Six episodes make up the new season of the National Geographic series.

"She is a 4- or 5-year-old girl and she is a living goddess. It's incredible. She was chosen at her young age and will continue to be the incarnation of a god until she reaches puberty. She is carried at all times, because her feet cannot touch the ground; if she bleeds, she will no longer be a god and would be considered a mortal," says James.

Referring to the challenges that the series has entailed in the last three years, the producer explains that they always sought to offer something attractive and interesting both for people who believe in God and for those who believe in science.

"From the very beginning, we have tried to present things in a broad way, and I think the common idea is that science is looking for answers to very difficult questions: How did we get here? Or, what will happen when we die?" Younger explains.

This new installment of the series will discuss questions like: Who is the devil? Are there people who embody the divine? Where do visions come from? How do we face the reality that we are all prone to sin? And why are secrets and religion so often intertwined?

"We do not have many scientific sessions this season, although we did a very interesting story on the episode 'Visions of God,' which features a man named Ian Vall, who had a brain tumor, underwent surgery and then began to have divine visions. He woke up one morning and basically says he had a breakfast in the universe," recalls James.

Finally, Younger stressed that working with Freeman has its obstacles.

"The difficulties are sometimes due to logistics issues. Trying to film in public places — churches, temples or streets — is not so easy because of the crowds that want to see Morgan. Having a movie star trying to explore is a real challenge. He is an amazing person," the executive producer concludes.

Derby controversy rocks betting industry

The decision reversal on the finish cost bettors around $9 million.

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is a veteran sports journalist and the Founder and Editor in Chief of MetroBet.

GETTY IMAGES

The line between winning and losing a bet is oftentimes as thin as a dragonfly's tail, and such was the case on Saturday at Churchill Downs, when a reversal of the original outcome of the race went down in controversial fashion.

An objection filed against Maximum Security for interfering with the path of other horses during the race gave Country House, at an incredible 65-1 odds, the victory and had bettors everywhere put into a state of hysteria.

TwinSpires.com, which runs the betting operations at Churchill Downs, reported that the decision to nix Maximum Security's victory cost bettors approximately $9 million. TwinSpires and several sportsbooks across the country are in the process of offering partial refunds for those who bet on Maximum Security.

According to Yahoo Sports, the largest win bet on Country House at Churchill Downs was $2,500, which paid out a net of $162,500. Conversely, the largest win bet on Maximum Security that was all for not was $8,000, which would have paid out a net of $32,000.

Derby nuggets

- One bettor named Rick Broth, who boxed Country House and Code of Honor, won the "Kentucky Derby Betting Championship," which was worth $147,000. Broth had actually left Churchill Downs but quickly turned around when he received a phone call from a friend, alerting him of the controversy surrounding the finish.

"I went from being the biggest loser that ever lived to a great story," Broth told Yahoo. "I couldn't believe it. I was like, 'Are you kidding me?' I've been taken down 100 times at the track for big money, so to be put up is just unbelievable."

- Legal sports betting predictably gave Derby Day a boost as a new betting record was set. Betting on the Derby was up 10 percent as $165.5 million was wagered on the big race alone, not even including the undercard races.

- Rocket Mortgage ran a Derby contest where they had 20 finalists, each assigned to one horse. "Allen from Chicago" wound up winning $250,000 to go toward paying off his mortgage.

I wonder how many betting slips were torn up at the end of the race because they were losers?

And now obviously they are not.

Stanley Cup Playoffs Monday

Bruins at Blue Jackets
Puckline: Bruins +1.5 goals (-280), Blue Jackets -1.5 goals (+240)
Betting Total: 5.5 goals (Over +105, Under -125)
The Bruins' top-line forwards came to life in Game 5 to turn back a determined Blue Jackets squad. With momentum squarely on their side, the Bruins go for the series-clinching victory at Nationwide Arena on Monday.

David Pastrnak has been struggling with consistency throughout the playoffs for Boston. But he delivered two goals, including the final one of Game 5 with just 1:28 left in regulation, to give his club the 4-3 victory. It was part of a combined six-point, 15-shot effort in 5-on-5 play (per Boston.com) between Pastrnak, Patrice Bergeron and Brad Marchand.

Boston should expect Columbus to pull out all the stops on offense in this one, but the Bruins were third in goals allowed per game (2.59) this season. Expect Tuukka Rask and the blueliners to have a solid game and help eliminate the Blue Jackets.
The play: Bruins +105

Sharks at Avalanche
Puckline: Sharks +1.5 goals (-270), Avalanche -1.5 goals (+230)
Betting Total: 5.5 goals (Over -125, Under +105)
The Avalanche, who have been outshot in four straight games, will try to stave off elimination against the Sharks at the Pepsi Center on Monday night.

Were it not for the brilliant play of goalie Philipp Grubauer in recent days, Colorado might have already been sent packing. San Jose has scored just twice in Games 4 and 5 combined despite putting 71 shots on goal. The Sharks' netminder, Martin Jones, was seldom tested in a 22-shot effort by the Avalanche forwards in Game 5. However, the venue has changed, and Colorado is bound to have made adjustments. Nathan MacKinnon, who had scored in three straight prior to Game 5, can only be kept quiet for so long.
The play: Avalanche -130

Leonard carries Raptors over 76ers in Game 4

Sixers big man Joel Embiid was held to 11 points.

Kawhi Leonard had 39 points and 14 rebounds and the second-seeded Toronto Raptors defeated the host Philadelphia 76ers, 101-96, on Sunday to even the Eastern Conference semifinals at two games apiece.

Marc Gasol scored 16 points and Kyle Lowry added 14 points and seven assists for Toronto.

Pascal Siakam, who had been doubtful with a sore calf, was in the starting lineup and missed his first seven shots, but he gave the Raptors a lift with nine points and three steals.

Game 5 is Tuesday in Toronto.

Jimmy Butler paced the third-seeded Sixers with 29 points and 11 rebounds while JJ Redick added 19. Joel Embiid, who was reportedly ill, had only 11 points, eight rebounds and seven assists one game after scoring 33 in Philadelphia's Game 3 victory.

Leonard was terrific with 17 points and 10 rebounds as the Raptors pulled ahead, 47-45, at halftime. It was the first time in Leonard's career that he posted at least 15 points and 10 rebounds in any half.

Butler was the only Philadelphia player in double figures with 14 points in the first half. Embiid appeared to be bothered by a left leg issue and finished with only six points and five rebounds.

Butler hit a difficult 3-pointer from the wing and the Sixers pulled ahead, 57-52, with 7:48 left in the third.

Siakam finally recorded his first basket when he received a pass from Lowry and threw down a dunk for a 66-65 Raptors advantage with 4:15 remaining in the third.

Harris later drained a 3-pointer to give the Sixers a two-point lead with under a minute left in the quarter. Serge Ibaka then hit a jump hook in the lane and the Raptors tied the game at 75 at the end of the third.

The game became quite chippy with bodies falling to the floor and both teams diving for loose balls while playing a physical brand of basketball.

Leonard hit 1 of 2 two free throws and Toronto led, 85-84, with 6:20 left.

Despite missing nine straight shots, the Sixers still trailed by only 89-87 with 2:35 remaining after a pair of Jimmy Butler free throws.

Leonard's trey with the shot clock running out gave the Raptors a 94-90 advantage with 1:01 left, and after Tobias Harris missed a 3-pointer on the 76ers' ensuing possession, Toronto sealed the win by making 7 of 10 free throws down the stretch.

Eflin tosses another gem as Phils top Nationals, take two of three

The Phils righty gave up four hits and struck out five.

Pitcher Zach Eflin struck out five in Sunday's win. GETTY IMAGES

Zach Eflin had another strong start and the host Philadelphia Phillies took advantage of defensive miscues to beat the Washington Nationals, 7-1, on a rainy Sunday, taking two of three games in the series.

The Nationals have won just three series this year and lost for the 11th time in 16 games.

Washington starter Anibal Sanchez (0-5) fell to 5-11 in his career against the Phillies despite fanning a season-high nine batters in 4 2/3 innings while allowing two runs, none earned.

Eflin (4-3), after a complete game in his previous start against the Miami Marlins, allowed just one run on four hits with five strikeouts in a 108-pitch outing.

The Phillies put the game away with five runs in the sixth off reliever Matt Grace, who retired the only batter he faced in the fifth.

A run scored on a bunt single by Eflin, Jean Segura drove in a run with a fielder's choice, Bryce Harper had an RBI single and Rhys Hoskins drove in two with a double to make it 7-1.

Washington's Kurt Suzuki hit his third homer of the series in the fourth, with his solo shot trimming the margin to 2-1. It is the first time in his 13-year career he has homered in three straight games.

The Nationals defense gave the Phillies two extra outs in the first.

Rookie shortstop Carter Kieboom made an error on a grounder by Segura to put two runners at first and second. Two outs and a walk later, first baseman Jake Noll — just called up from Triple-A — couldn't come up with a grounder off the bat of Cesar Hernandez as two runs scored.

Before the game, the Nationals put first baseman Matt Adams (shoulder) on the 10-day injured list and called up Noll from Fresno. Noll was not looking when Sanchez threw a pickoff that hit Noll in the upper body in the first inning, but baserunner Andrew McCutchen did not advance.

Washington is in the early stages of playing 33 games in 34 days through May 29. REUTERS
